What are pop-up windows?

Pop-up windows are messages that suddenly appear while browsing or playing online games, asking you to do something quickly. Not all of them are bad, but some can be traps.

Where is the greatest risk?

Through video games and mobile devices, children and teenagers are confronted with pop-up windows that offer:

- ★ “Before time runs out” offers.
- ★ Free rewards for installing apps.
- ★ Surprise chests or fake coins.
- ★ Ads that mimic the game itself.

Signs of danger

Be suspicious if you see any of these signs in a pop-up window:

- ★ It uses fear or urgency: “Your device is infected!”
- ★ It promises incredible prizes or impossible discounts.
- ★ It asks for passwords, bank details or payments.
- ★ It tells you to call “technical support”.
- ★ It can't be closed or it keeps reappearing.

Three golden rules for families

Teach your children the following safety rules:

- ★ Do not touch anything in a suspicious window.
- ★ Close the page from your browser, not from the pop-up.
- ★ Always ask an adult before clicking.
